Mobile Wireless Hotspots-

They are everywhere now. Mobile wireless hotspots. All of us are tied to the internet now in business. We have to be able and access the web, the connection can mean closing a deal or not. Most homeowners let alone most offices have wireless networks to access with their laptops or smartphones.

In the past you could purchase a wireless aircard from Verizon or Sprint and plug it into a router and it would split the connection so others could share it. Now these carriers offer Mifi. It is a small wallet like device that connects directly to the carrier's network and up to 5 computers can share the connection.

Unlike your home router, this hotspot is portable. From wherever you are in the coverage area, it detects the Verizon or Sprint 3G network and allows you access their wireless broadband connection. The battery can last just over 4 hours or you can plug the mifi into an outlet. It is the size of 4 or 5 stacked business cards and weighs just over 2 ounces. Speeds will run around 1.5 kbps down and 300 kbps up. You can connect it to your notebook (laptop) with the included USB cable. It has password protection, VPN pass through, and a firewall for security. The plans will run $60 a month for 5 GB of data internet access and the device itself runs $99 with a 2 year agreement.

What is Right About Sports -

I have been asked all week what I thought about this unknown former weightlifter from Seoul South Korean, Y.E. Yang upsetting our very own Tiger Woods in the PGA Championship. This man had only won one event on the tour up until now. He finished with a miraculous birdie on the last hole to win. He is a very solid player and now his life has changed forever. Tiger as it turns out did not win a major in 2009. He could not pull out his magic this time. I have to say though that it does not surprise me at all that this up and comer stole the show from Tiger.

Let's be honest here, if it weren't for Tiger these guys may not be this good. He raised the bar so high that now many of these players are reaching up to grab it. Oh but do not worry, Mr. Woods will surpass the great one, Jack Nicklaus and reign supreme over major championship victories, all in due time. But for golf globally, this is a wonderful thing. On the women's tour, the Koreans have dominated over the last couple of years.

Now they have success on the PGA tour and guess what? Golf will become even more popular globally. This fierce competition makes for a more interesting spectator sport. Y.E. handled the situation brilliantly, so much that I could not help but kind of like him as it played out. Tiger, Y.E., thanks for creating this atmosphere on the tour, you are what is right about sports.

Mikes Mobile Minutes-

The internet is spreading quickly along with the ease of connecting to it. Many businesses with vehicles are now deploying wireless hotspots within and around their vehicles. This gives the employees the ability to access the net to obtain information.

A company can setup shop at a client site or do a trade show and can run live video and invite others to share the connection. Police vehicles are roaming hotspots; they have to access live information via the web and a server at any given time. A group of executives can move their meeting to just about anywhere with this device. How does this apply to your business?

"If we pull this off, we'll eat like kings."
