

Google GPS Maps for Smart Phones -

I spend several hours a week working with clients and vendors in regards to GPS tracking services and projects. We help companies manage their fleet of vehicles by reducing fuel costs, reducing liability, and providing better customer service. Creating an efficient routing system can be a big part of that. Navigational GPS has become a staple in our technology segment these days. How many Garmin devices will you see today while stopped in traffic? Just look left or right, you are bound to see a handful of them. They are great devices to have. Now navigational GPS has penetrated the Smartphone. You can pay a monthly fee to have a service like Telenav right on your phone. Some carriers like Sprint offer this service as a part of their unlimited plan which makes it a great value add.

But did you know there are free services like Google maps? Once downloaded you can search your location, find business locations and addresses, or even do a direct phone dial to the business from the search. You can get driving directions in either map view or satellite view and you can zoom in or out. It is no different than viewing the maps on your PC in the office or at home.

I was recently in New York and I used these maps every day to find information and pinpoint my location. Having my Blackberry and Google maps was a real life saver because it is so easy to get turned around in that city. Just about every cab we got into had a navigational GPS interactive screen in the vehicle to visually see where you are. If you have a Smartphone, download this application

What is Right About Sports -

I watched painfully as he ripped my team apart last night. On the field, he has more simultaneous hand gestures than a band conductor. The whole team watches his every move to get the play. He stands up there, reads the defense and makes the proper adjustments. He usually comes out on top.

I am of course speaking of Peyton Manning. The guy is simply put the best at what he does. He has taken the NFL quarterback job to another level these days. You just cannot help but like this guy. He studies and prepares for each upcoming game more than his own coaches do.

He has total respect of his teammates and is in complete control over just about everything that his offense does. Heck his opponents respect him as much as his own team. As a leader, how many people can claim that? The defenses he faces are on their heels just trying to figure him out.

Last week the Dolphins kept him off the field for the vast majority of the game and the Colts still won. This week he shredded my NFC Champion Cardinals. He carries a wrecking ball with him from week to week. He is on a path of greatness and we all get to witness it.

and use it, unless you like fumbling with multi folded paper maps!

Mikes Mobile Minutes-

Anyone with a Windows Mobile device, Blackberry, or I-phone can go to their phone and type m.google.com/maps into their browser and download the maps for free.

But most important of all is how he carries himself and what he does off the field. The guy is a complete class act. Candidly, he is the sports figure we should all encourage our children to look up to. Peyton you are what is right about sports.
