

Femtocell to the rescue -

We all discuss coverage issues from day to day. Does anyone really like dropping a call? But it happens and we have all learned to deal with it. Here is the good news. Major carriers are now offering a small scale solution to this dilemma. They are called Femtocells. Verizon offers a device known as the Network extender. Sprint calls theirs an Airave. They claim it will extend coverage up to 5,000 sq. feet and will support 3 calls at the same time. Samsung is the manufacturer for both carriers. The device will enhance your indoor coverage in the home or office. The device acts as a mini cell tower and will provide a more reliable wireless service. It will boost signal in an area that was previously a weak coverage area. All you need is a high speed broadband connection or DSL with minimum 300 kbps download.

Mikes Mobile Minutes -

There are several "coverage enhancement" products in the market. But for the most part, the carriers do not endorse the products. This is a legitimate way to overcome the challenge if being in a weak area for coverage. Verizon offers their network extender for $199 and no monthly fee. Sprint offers their Airave for $99 and a $4.99 monthly fee. This is a very reasonable approach to improving coverage performance in areas that you visit frequently.

What is right about sport -

Well the Lakers have done it again. They are back in the finals to challenge the Celtics for supremacy. But I am writing this article about Steve Nash. If you want your kids to look up to an athlete, this is your guy. He grew up in Vancouver Canada. After college, as his basketball career began to blossom, he really started to make a name for himself in Dallas. He was brought back to the Phoenix Suns several years ago.

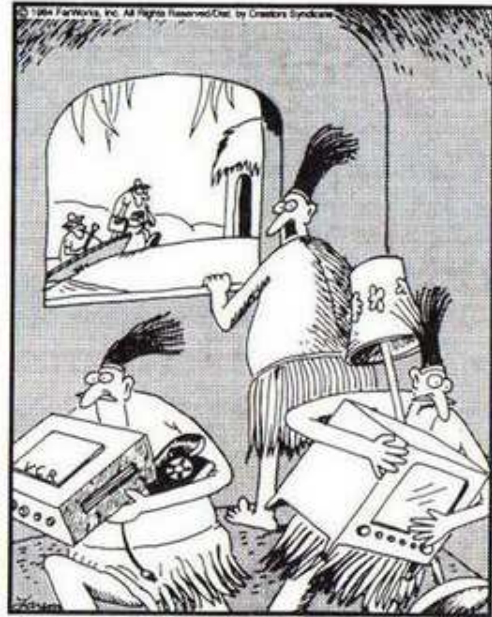

He has now won 2 MVP awards and been to the Western Conference finals 4 times. People will say that he has not made it to the Finals yet and Kobe Bryant just once again took that away from him. But he is 6 foot nothing, and a hundred and nothing competing against multiple Goliath's from night to night. Yet he excels year after year. He talks about team chemistry and leads the league in assists every year proving just how unselfish he is.

When he won his first MVP trophy, he had all his teammates come to the podium as though he was embarrassed to accept the honor by himself. Most people doubt him again and again and he continues to win and prove them wrong. When his team losses, he never points his fingers at his teammates, but rather accepts the blame for him to improve. At age 36 he will be doubted, but he will continue to overcome and succeed. This may end up being another John Elway story where he wins a championship at the end of his career. But something tells me if that does not happen, he will be ok. He will find peace in knowing he did it right. Steve Nash, you are what is right about sports.
